If you are having difficulty with a task, please seek extra help right away. Also, you may have to make up missed instruction and work at a time other than in class. Curriculum Story

What is the individual's role in society? As we mature and become more aware of ourselves within the context of the world around us, we can use literature to understand and explore our relationships with each other and society as a whole, helping us identify and overcome the challenges we face as we interact with others and become part of various communities throughout our lives. This year, you will develop your analytical skills through critical, close reading of a wide range of complex contemporary and classic texts, both fiction and nonfiction, learning to generate assertions about the texts you read and cite strong supporting textual evidence to develop your ideas. Basic research skills will develop as you write an original paper. Application of specific grammatical concepts and vocabulary will make your writing more engaging and clear. By evaluating the effects of literary devices and techniques, word choice, and structure, in our own writing as well as in the writing of others, we will grow as readers, writers, speakers, and listeners.

Grading Policy

- ◆ Assignments will be assigned a point value according to their relative weight. (Most essays and quizzes will be worth 100 points, but a shorter task, such as a paragraph response, might be worth 20 points.)
- ◆ You will be informed of the point value of your assignments when they are assigned.
- ◆ Your average for the quarter is the percentage of points you scored out of the total points for all the quarter's assignments.

Late papers are penalized the relevant equivalent of ten points per day. Excessively late papers will not receive a grade.

You should earn an overall 85 average to continue to English 10 Honors.

Homework Standards & Submission

Homework Board:

The chalkboard on the door side of the classroom will have a list of at least the upcoming week's homework, tests and quizzes, and most graded classroom assignments. On a typical Monday, I will review the list as you make note of each assignment in your agenda. Only on rare occasions will the dates change after they have been written on the homework board and in your agendas. This will help you develop time management skills.

Class Website's "Week At A Glance" (<http://eienglish.org/weekataglance9.html>):

This webpage is a calendar of each day's class objectives and homework. There are clickable links to vocabulary lists, essay questions, and many other documents from class if you need to access copies of materials. You also may email me for a copies of some documents not found on the webpage. The webpage often provides a further glimpse into the future than the chalkboard, but plans on the website that span beyond the homework board change frequently, so verify the timeliness of information by consulting the last modified date found near the top right side of the page. A printed copy of the days included on the homework board will be posted in the back of the room weekly.

"Due Dates" vs. "Do Dates"

The homework board and "Week At A Glance" tell you what day you must come to class with the completed homework; they do not tell you what days to work on the homework to have it completed by the assigned due date. Consider your workload in other classes as well as commitments outside of class. Schedule your time wisely.

Homework Basket:

When a graded homework is due for submission, such as an essay, place it in the appropriate grade level basket on the windowsill. Do this as soon as you enter class to maximize classroom time. Sometimes, we will use the homework in the day's activity; in this case, there will be a note in the basket telling you to keep your homework at your desk and put it in the basket at the end of the period. It is your responsibility to submit all homework on time. Any assignment not submitted by the end of the school day is late. When you return to class from a short absence of one or two days, place the missing homework in the basket. I will not remind you to submit homework missed as a result of an absence.

Electronic Submission:

If you have a problem with printing, please email me the file as a PDF, RTF, or DOC or DOCX file. I will send you a reply where I have added "RECEIVED & PRINTED" to your subject line. If you do not receive this reply, I have not received or seen the email. Do not expect to print your homework at the beginning of the class period, and I cannot guarantee that I have the time to print your homework overnight so that you can use it in class the next day. The school now allows students to access Word 365 for document creation.

Homework Scoring & Records:

Sometimes, I want you to wrestle with challenging tasks on your own in preparation for meaningful work in the classroom. It is not reasonable to assign much weight to homework that I expect to be too challenging to complete fully or too basic to merit many points (i.e., vocabulary proof of study). On time work of this nature can be recorded with a score as low as "2" and notably incomplete or late work will be recorded with a score of "1."

Academic Honesty & Outside Sources:

All assigned homework is to be completed individually. You should look up terminology and references unfamiliar to you in a reliable, factual source. However, you should not consult other students or online interpretations of texts unless the assignment's written instructions specifically require you to do so.

When you come to class on Mondays, begin copying the week's work from the homework board into your agenda without being prompted.

Place your homework in the basket at the beginning of the class period without being prompted.

If you are having a problem printing at home, email me the assignment.
